MESD awaits federal funds

By Andy Slering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Efforts are continuing to free up $400,000 of federal money this month to finance improvement of gravity drains in Metro East.

The U.S. government's fiscal year ends Sept. 30. Officials said they hope to have 1988-89 funds allocated within a few days so that flood control system rehabilitation can be started soon, in advance of more comprehensive phases of the rehab plan starting in 1990.

Unclogging of gravity drains leading into the Mississippi River was selected by the St. Louis District of the Army Corps of Engineers to lead into a 1990-94 federal/state/local program endorsed by voters Feb. 23.

The five-year project will modernize stormwater and surface drainage facilities in western Madison and St. Clair counties. The area is served by the Metro East Sanitary District, whose headquarters are located in Granite City.

By a 3-1 margin, voters in February approved a referendum raising the MESD tax rate limit by 26 cents for five years to pay for the district's share of modernization and repair work.

The federal government is matching portions of the program on a 3 to 1 basis. After five years, the MESD tax increase will be lessened, with the net increase over the 1988 tax rate paying for yearly operation and maintenance.

"We're in the delicate stage of getting lots of paperwork rammed through," Ron Lindsay said. He is project manager for the St. Louis Engineer District, which is overseeing the project.

"They're in the process of telling us where to go" in proceeding with upgrading of the river-flood and interior-flood protection system renovation, Shang Greathouse, MESD executive director, said.

Although a smaller financial total was projected at the time of the Congressional authorization enacted near the end of the U.S. House tenure of the late Rep. Melvin Price, studies have shown that work aggregating $38 million would be useful in assuring adequate regional drainage, Lindsay said.

The work is to include upgrading pumps at river levees, improving other pumping stations and expediting drainage flow in a network of canals, channels and ditches.

Lindsay said federal review agencies are checking on the extent to which Engineer Corps money can be used on the canals because they were not originally constructed by the Corps.

Such work is "up in the air right now," he said. Another factor under study, he noted, is that the overall cost estimate for rehabilitation of the system has risen about $7 million since the original plans were made.

Lindsay stressed that nothing has been settled and that the rehab project as a whole is not in danger of being scuttled.

"It's a question of how much of the channel rehabilitation would have to be done to rehab the system," Lindsay said. "Possibly, just the main channels need to be done."

He said there is also "the question of how much the MESD can afford. If we have a $38 million project, the MESD probably couldn't afford to pay for one-quarter of that."

Lindsay said the MESD and the Engineer Corps are discussing the possibility of letting the MESD in effect, pay for an increased amount by counting MESD employees' labor as an in-kind contribution.

Hartigan files suit against Shell Oil

By Valerie Evenden

GRANITE CITY — A $1,185,000 lawsuit against Shell Oil Co. over the release of toxic chemicals from its Roxane-Wood River refinery was filed Thursday by Illinois Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan, who is seeking maximum penalties.

The plant is about 10 miles due north of Pontoon Beach along Route 111.

"Potentially dangerous substances have been released in the air over the past 18 months," Hartigan said Thursday.

"It's only a matter of luck that something serious didn't happen and it's only a matter of time before something does happen unless problems at the refinery are corrected."

"It doesn't make sense to roll the dice with people's lives," the attorney general said at a press conference at his regional office in Granite City.

"Their pattern of behavior over the past two years is simply unacceptable," he said.

"We are aware the complaint was filed," Tony Canino said Friday. He is Shell Oil community relations manager-Midwest.

Blast furnace sludge cited

GRANITE CITY — A lawsuit brought by Illinois Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan against National Steel Corp. for operating landfills on its property at Granite City Steel has been settled amicably, Hartigan said Thursday at a press conference in Granite City.

One of the landfills was operated without the appropriate permit, Hartigan said. A permit was obtained by the company while the suit was pending, he said.

"The EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) felt that they (the company) did everything right, but they were operating a second landfill without a permit," said Assistant Attorney General Joe Madonia, deputy chief of the department's environmental group.

Substances in the landfills were chemical wastes, with definite environmental effects, but were not hazardous or toxic, he said.

"We call it special waste. Mostly, it was sludge from the blast furnace," Madonia said.

No one knew the second landfill was there until recently, Madonia said. He was unsure how it was discovered.

"The EPA makes various inspections at plants and someone could have noticed it at that time," he said.

National Steel has agreed to make an $8,000 contribution to the Environmental Protection Fund and close the other landfill under EPA guidelines or remove the refuse stored there and bury it in the permitted site.

Sister insists Turner innocent

By Andy Slering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Tony Turner is serving two consecutive life sentences plus 30 years for crimes his sister says he didn't commit.

Turner was arrested Aug. 25 in Granite City after more than five months as a fugitive from justice. He escaped March 5 from Jefferson County (Mo.) authorities in Hillsboro, Mo., where he had been transferred for a court hearing. He faces additional charges for escaping.

Turner was originally convicted for two drug store holdups occurring in St. Louis County and Hillsboro and got the life sentences in 1983 under Missouri's habitual offender law. Turner has spent much of his adult life in prison, mostly for burglaries.

Marilyn Becerra of Granite City, Turner's sister, has three letters she claims were written by a man she says actually committed the armed robberies for which Turner was convicted. The man resembles Turner, she said.

The letters were sent from a Missouri prison to a woman Becerra knows, and two of them were to be forwarded to Turner and another prisoner. The woman gave them to Becerra instead.

The Press Record/Journal reviewed the letters, but could not determine their authenticity. One of the letters seems to indicate that Turner was innocent of the armed robberies.

A letter to another man, sentenced with Turner for the crimes, says the man had considered testifying on Turner's behalf since he was already in jail. But it makes reference to his reasons "that change my mind about coping out for him."

"He (Turner) has been talking bad about us, saying we ain't nothing but punks. He thinks we're never getting out...."

"Let him take the weight with you. He has already been identified as me.... So just keep me out of the picture."

Becerra also claims that during one of Turner's trials, in St. Louis County, a St. Louis police detective said to Turner, "We know you're not good for these robberies, you little bald-headed but we got you and we're gonna keep you."

Becerra said that, when she showed the letters to one of Turner's lawyers, Clinton Almond of Hillsboro, "he said it's too late in the ball game."

Almond, who laughed when asked about the letters, declined to say whether he thought they might be genuine and would say only that he had seen them.

Turner escaped from Hillsboro the day before a motion was to be presented asking that his convictions be set aside based on ineffective representation by counsel.

Almond said such a motion is routine. "It's the last resort for anyone," he said. "Most attorneys encourage their clients to do that."

Becerra admits her brother is a burglar. "But he's not an armed robber," she said. "It's out of his league. He has a lot of compassion for people. He has a heart of gold, and he'd give you the shirt off his back."

Becerra says every police department "in a 300-mile radius is using him to clean up unsolved crimes, instead of looking for the guilty."

Of his escape, she says, Turner "did nothing no one else wouldn't have done if the opportunity had arisen. He hurt no one, stole nothing — only his freedom."

Becerra praised Police Chief Don Knight for persuading Turner to surrender in August. She claimed, "The word on the street was the police were going to shoot him on sight."

Granite boy identified

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

MONROE COUNTY — The body of a young man found seven miles south of the Jefferson Barracks Bridge on Monday night has been positively identified as 18-year-old Thomas Haywood Mathias Batey IV of Granite City.

Monroe County Coroner DeAnn Stumpf said Friday the decomposed body was that of Thomas Batey of the 1100 block of 22nd Street, who reportedly jumped on a dare from the Merchants Bridge at Venice into the Mississippi River about 1 a.m. Sept. 1.

Among the determining factors in identifying the youth was comparison of some family photographs taken when he was a young child; the pictures showed unusual structures to several front teeth and an old fracture of an upper arm, Stumpf said. Height, weight and matching clothing also entered into the identification, she said.

An inquest will be held after toxicology and pathology reports are gathered, the coroner said.

The body was recovered by the U.S. Coast Guard after being seen by fishermen near the mouth of the Meramec River, close to Columbia, Ill.

The location is about 20 miles downstream from North Venice, Petty Officer Michael Holder of the U.S. Coast Guard estimated.

The boy jumped from the railroad bridge during a swimming party with friends at the Venice riverfront, witnesses told Venice police.

An obituary notice appears in today's issue.

Monday, Sept. 21, 1964

An explosion blew out a rear window of the Thermo-Pane Glass Co., 2007 Madison Ave., causing several thousand dollars' worth of damage to the building and large panes of glass stored inside.

Briefly

Accident ends in arrest

John William Dank, 35, of the 2900 block of Marshall Avenue was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, failing to reduce speed to avoid an accident and disobeying a stop sign when arrested at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 12 in the 2500 block of Edwards Street.

He was driving a station wagon west when it struck a parked sedan owned by Francis J. Frykula of the 2500 block of Edwards. Dank allegedly got out of his vehicle and started to flee on foot but was stopped by two residents who held him until police arrived. Dank posted $102 bail and was released pending a court hearing.

Booked on two charges

After an officer alleged seeing an eastbound car on Washington Avenue skid to a stop about 30 feet from an intersection, and then veer to the right and return to cross the center line, the policeman stopped the driver, William P. Arnold, 50, of the 2500 block of Stratford Lane in a parking lot at 26th Street and Washington Avenue Sept. 12. Arnold was booked for driving under the influence of alcohol and driving while his license was suspended.

3 charges against woman

Deborah L. Ogle, 36, of the 2600 block of Logan Avenue was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, illegal transportation of alcohol and driving the wrong way on a one-way street Sept. 15.

Two officers saw a car going south on Iowa Street, a northbound street, and pull into the back parking lot at police headquarters to let out of a passenger.

Ogle, the driver, allegedly had one full can and three empty cans of beer in the car. She posted $102 bail pending an Oct. 12 court appearance.

Two licenses revoked

Quadrant City area residents whose driver's licenses have been revoked by Secretary of State Jim Edgar's office for conviction of driving under the influence of alcohol include:

- Michael A. Harlan, 30, of the 1700 block of Delmar Avenue, arrested April 21, convicted Aug. 30.
- Garth C. Widel, 31, of the 2700 block of Willow Avenue, arrested Aug. 13, convicted Aug. 31.

Haine wants school raids

Police dogs could be sniffing for dope in Madison County schools early next year, said State's Attorney William Haine.

Haine said he plans to talk with school officials about using a new law authorizing school districts to invite law enforcement officials to conduct the surprise searches for illegal drugs.

Haine said there is evidence from police investigations that drugs are being distributed on school property in Madison County.

"The only way to root it out is to have the ability to install the fear of the law. My office and police agencies need to show a presence in the schools as a deterrent against drugs," Haine said.

Haine said he was not criticizing school officials for being unable to stop drug use, but "they are educators and not policemen and they are not equipped to do it alone."

The law, which takes effect Jan. 1, was part of a package of bills Gov. James Thompson had pushed to combat drug abuse. He signed the bills last week.

In 1982, then-State's Attorney Don Weber staged a series of surprise drug checks with dogs at Alton, East Alton-Wood River and Edwardsville high schools. No illegal narcotics were found. Weber is now a top assistant to Haine.

Haine said he welcomed the new law as another tool in trying to rid schools of drugs.

Haine said he anticipated no problems in carrying out the drug searches if school officials agree to them.

Law enforcement bills signed

Gov. James R. Thompson on Aug. 31 signed a number of law enforcement bills.

Senate Bill 665 makes it a Class 2 felony to possess a silencer and to sell, manufacture, purchase or possess a machine gun and certain explosives in public housing projects. A conviction would carry a maximum of seven years in prison. It also makes it a Class 3 felony to carry a firearm on public housing property. The penalty for a Class 3 felony is five years in prison. Similar penalties already exist for such crimes on school property.

Senate Bill 255 requires the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA) to increase spending on crime protection services by setting 1988 spending as the minimum level for future expenditures and requiring additional spending of at least 15 percent of the State subsidies for transit services to students, the elderly and people with disabilities. It has been estimated that spending would increase from the current $8 million to at least $13.5 million.

Senate Bill 8 permits Chicago to adopt an ordinance providing for the immediate removal of "hazardous vehicles" from city streets. Hazardous vehicles include those damaged or altered making the vehicle either inoperable or threatening to the public's health and safety.

House Bill 1256 grants the governor authority to declare an economic emergency in a designated community on the recommendation of the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs (DCCA). The bill allows DCCA to make grants and loans to economic emergency communities.

Board member escapes DUI charge

By Mary Brase
Staff writer

A charge of driving under the influence against Madison County Board member Rudy Papa was dismissed after he completed an alcohol treatment program and pleaded guilty to careless driving, Papa said recently.

A Democrat, he has represented the Bethalto/Cottage Hills area on the board since 1982. He paid a $300 fine and is under court supervision for 90 days.

Papa, a Bethalto teacher, said he did not seek favorable treatment related to his offense.

He was represented by attorney Keith Jensen, who informed him of the plea agreement.

The DUI charge, dismissed in early September on grounds of no probable cause, stems from an accident in Bethalto July 27.

Papa said Papa was slightly injured but refused medical treatment after his car ran off the road and slammed into a power pole at Second and Winona streets at about 2:30 a.m.

Papa refused a breath test but had his license returned Sept. 1 as part of the negotiated plea, he said. The charge was his first.

Refusal to take the test results in an automatic suspension of a driver's license for six months.

Papa said Papa was charged with DUI and careless driving after he failed a field sobriety test and had a strong odor of alcohol.

Papa immediately entered the CareUnit program at Wood River Township Hospital, completing it Aug. 18.

"When I saw the condition of my car and I was walking around, I thanked the good Lord and decided to go in on my own volition," Papa said later.

A report to the court indicated Papa successfully completed the program and had a good chance of recovery.

Police Chief Jim Reno said the Papa case was not unusual.

"As far as I know, there wasn't anything done any differently for him than anybody else," Reno said.

Reno said he was called by Assistant State's Attorney Greg Erthal and was asked if he had any problem with a plea bargain; he didn't.

Begging boy referred to caseworker

A small boy begging for money and food at McDonald's Restaurant at 21st Street and Madison Avenue at 9:50 a.m. Wednesday was turned over to a caseworker for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services later the same day.

Patrolman Bob Krause went to the restaurant and talked with the boy, who was wearing a coat and shorts but no shirt or shoes. He also had a sore on the bottom of his right foot, which was swollen. It was raining and it degrees at the time.

Two people from St. Elizabeth Medical Center who had been called by restaurant employees said the sore foot was infected.

The boy said he was 10 years old and lived on Madison Avenue, but couldn't provide an exact address.

He was not in school because his mother had not yet taken him for a physical examination, the boy told the officer.

The foot was injured when he stepped on some hot ashes while playing with a friend a few days earlier, he told police. He was barefoot when it happened, he said.

After the boy finished a meal, Krause took him to police headquarters and the DCFPS was notified.

Battery, damage alleged Responding to a report of a disturbance on Parkview Drive at 2:55 a.m. Tuesday, officers went to an apartment there and arrested Thomas L. Carpenter, 24, of the 2500 block of Parkview Drive.

Carpenter was charged with criminal damage to property and two counts of battery after Deanna P. Cavanaugh, who resides in the 2500 block of Parkview Drive, said Carpenter forced his way into her apartment and battered her and her 9-year-old son.

She alleged that Carpenter was pounding on the door and, while she was calling police on the telephone, he forced open the door, breaking the door and splintering the frame.

Carpenter took the phone from her, dragged her into the living room and threw her to the floor, she alleged, adding that Carpenter grabbed the boy, shook him and pushed him against a couch.

A passenger in the auto, David Kuehnell, 24, of the Benton Street address accidentally hit the shift selector with his knee, causing the auto to move forward.

Emergencies focus of Protestant Welfare

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of stories about local United Way agencies, published to coincide with the current campaign of Tri-Cities Area United Way. These articles will be published as frequently as possible during the next several weeks.

Conceived by the Rev. Mason Gregg, former pastor of Central Christian Church, the Protestant Welfare Association has been providing services to low income families and others in need of emergency assistance since 1963. The Protestant Welfare Association, located at 2022 Edison St. in Granite City, renders assistance in the form of food, clothing, medical equipment, prescriptions and counseling without charge to families, adults and children in the Quad-City area, regardless of their race, creed or politics.

In 1989, the Protestant Welfare Association conducted its first Back to School/Care-N-Share Day which provided a complete new outfit for needy children to begin school in. More than 425 children received new outfits last year and this year even more children were helped in starting the school year off on the right foot.

PREPARING FOOD BASKETS for the needy are Dolores Galindo, secretary-director of Protestant Welfare, and Denise Wright, first vice president of its board of directors.

Typical of the type of assistance rendered by the Protestant Welfare Association is the case of the mother of three children who came to the association needing special shoes for her 2-year-old.

Two years later, the same lady came back seeking help on her utility bills and brought the child, now 4 years old, into the office to show that the child no longer needed special shoes.

In order to cut costs, with the exception of a paid secretary/director, all services supplied by the Protestant Welfare Association are done by volunteers.

Individuals interested in learning more about the organization may call the office of Protestant Welfare Association, 2022 Edison, at 876-8770.

GC Braille Center prints books for blind

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

For the past 10 years, Josephine Brunworth of Collinsville has been a volunteer worker at Braille Center 125 in Granite City.

About once each month, Brunworth and the other members of her shift go to the center.

"I wanted to do something to help someone," she said.

Brunworth, a member of Holy Cross Lutheran Church, has been a volunteer at the center since it began.

"It's something I could do, and it's not particularly hard to learn," she said.

Located in the basement of Concordia Lutheran Church in Granite City, the center prints parts of the Bible and other books in Braille.

One of about 200 in the nation, the center is operated by area Lutheran churches and uses volunteer workers.

Since its dedication in May 1979, the center has produced about 1.5 million sheets of Braille.

The national organization, the Lutheran Braille Workers Inc., is based in Yucaipa, Calif.

Today, 14 churches send between 200 and 250 volunteers each month in shifts of eight to create the pages.

In addition to Holy Cross in Collinsville, other Lutheran churches involved are Concordia, Hope and St. John in Granite City, St. James in Glen Carbon, St. John's in Maryville, St. Paul in Hamel, Good Shepherd in Collinsville, St. Paul in Troy, Trinity in Worden, Hope in Highland, Trinity in Edwardsville and Zion in Bethalto.

Another church, St. John Evangelical United Church of Christ, Collinsville, also participates.

"We ship them all over the world," said Al Accola, who oversees the operation with his wife Emily. "Our center has been shipping mostly to India."

The center prints four books: The Gospel According to Luke in Malayalam (an Indian dialect); The Revelation to John in Greek; One Hundred Bible Stories, in English; and the Wonder of the Word, also in English. The sheets are printed on both sides using metal plates and a machine to press the dots into the paper. A special paper that will absorb moisture from the readers' hands without deteriorating is used.

Emily Accola said each book can be read about 250 times before the dots start to wear down.

Using a 10-person shift, an 80-page book can be printed and bound in about 10-12 minutes, she said.

Al Accola said the center was started when Lutheran churches in the Metro East area were looking for some kind of charitable activity in which to participate.

"A couple checked into it in California," Emily Accola said. "We needed $1,300 for three machines (to print and bind the books)."

"That all came from donations from Sunday schools, women's organizations in the church and memorials," she said.

Brunworth said one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the center was the late Rev. Gilbert Busow, who was pastor of Holy Cross.

"He was the one who was very interested in it and was instrumental in getting our congregation involved," Brunworth said.

She said that for the past few months volunteers have been worried that the center might have to close because the Accolas were leaving. They plan to move to Columbia, Mo., later this month.

However, Al Accola said a new volunteer leader has been found.

"We had hoped (the center would remain open)," he said. "We had a prayer that it would continue because it's been a very successful operation."

Emily Accola said a most exciting aspect of the work is the letters received from people who use the books. She recalled one in particular:

"There was a place in Greece where the pastor was gone, and they had no one to take his place," she said. "There happened to be a blind man who could read Braille and he was going to help them out. Our books got there just in time to help with the services."

transferred to Christian Northeast Hospital for balloon surgery. She reports, "I'm doing fine."

Jerry and Diane Turner of Old Alton Road hosted a back-yard barbecue and swim party to celbrate the Labor Day weekend. Dinner was served to 27 friends and relatives.

Wayne and Barbara McDowell of E. Chain of Rocks Rd. hosted a barbecue dinner to celebrate the Labor Day weekend. Present besides the hosts and their children, Stephany, Nicole, and Carrie, were Jack and Lucy Calhoun and George and Kathy Wallace.

Several area residents attended the combined reunion of four southern Missouri schools namely Fry-McGee-Union Hill and Yokem, Sept. 9. The reunion was held at the Wappapello Civic Center, which once was the Wappapello school building, now converted into a civic center which senior activities and other public functions are held, and is located in the same area as the noted schools.

Attending from the area were Clifford and Maxine Dunihan and Lucy Collett all of Mitchell; Doris and Ruth de Cillis and Lyman and Pauline Rodgers all of Madison; and Willard and Pat Campbell of East Alton.

Dave and Daisy Ferguson of Meadowlane Drive and their son Frank Ferguson, his wife, Nancy and their children Rachel, Beckey, and Ethon of Wood River, attended the Ferguson Family Reunion which was held at the Old Fair Grounds Park in Jonesboro, Ill. Sept. 2.

This trip was more than a reunion for Dave Ferguson, for once his family had lived within a block of the entrance of the park where the reunion was held.

On the return trip the Fergusons toured the Shawnee Saltpeter Cave which is about six miles south of Jonesboro on Route 127. In the Civil War era saltpeter was mined from the cave to be used in gun powder.

"On the ceiling of the cave two men had written their names and the date. The date was in the mid-1700s. The names and the date are still legible," said Mrs. Ferguson.

"Near the cave is a look-out point from which you can view the gorge below. The gorge has a stream of water running through it and has many huge boulders. From the look-out point, paddles of boats can be seen being maneuvered downstream winding their way between the boulders," she said.

Catnip's effects amusing, but some deplore its use

Most people are aware of the obvious effect catnip has on cats. Many cats enjoy this common herb, and people get a certain amount of amusement from watching the cats affected by catnip.

For centuries people have known about the response of cats to catnip or catmint (Nepeta cataria). This plant grows as a weed throughout the temperate zones of Europe and North America. Some people grow it as a house plant so fresh catnip can be available for pets.

In the garden, it often is trampled by neighborhood cats as well as one's own cat. Once the plant is crushed its essence is released. It becomes irresistibly attractive and often is totally destroyed. Usually the plant will grow back if there is an undamaged area that can sprout. It is very hardy and will take quite a beating.

Many wild cats also respond to catnip. Lions, leopards and puma have been observed responding to catnip. The usual behavior sequence is to sniff, chew, rub, roll and meow. This varies in intensity from cat to cat. The capacity to detect or respond to catnip is inherited. Only 50 percent or so seem to be affected. Tom cats seem to be more responsive than females.

Although some of the activities of cats under the influence of catnip appear sexual, there seems to be no actual connection. Both males and females that have been neutered respond as readily as intact animals.

Pets

By Dorothy English

Nepetalactone, the essence of the plant that affects cats, has been isolated and now is used commercially with toys such as catnip mice. It also is available in aerosol cans.

Catnip seems to create a true psychedelic state when the molecule of nepetalactone reaches the brain. Cats have been observed sitting and staring at infinity or seen chasing phantom mice. The same biochemical pathways are affected by marijuana or LSD. Catnip, however, seems to be non-addictive and quite harmless.

The overuse of catnip might cause problems, but I am not aware of any serious studies on the subject. As a rule, cats are exposed to catnip at a minimal rate. Even catnip toys lose the essence quickly because it is volatile and disperses in the air.

A number of people do not approve of using catnip. Some feel not enough is known about its effects on the brain of the cat. Others feel it is not fitting to "drug" an animal in order to be amused by its unusual and sometimes outrageous response.

People who avoid the use of catnip because they feel it is not right to drug an animal for amusement purposes are to be highly respected for their refusal to subject a friend to ridicule. Although we do not know that the cat would be overly sensitive to being laughed at, the possibility certainly is there.

The use of catnip has not been proven harmful to cats. On the other hand it has not been shown to be beneficial to cats either. Perhaps a little extra thought should be given to the use of catnip and what it might really represent.

Being amused by the antics of a cat with catnip tends to put our cats in the same class as toys. Being concerned with the well being and dignity of a cat puts it in the class of a friend.

Simon introduces Illiteracy Elimination Act this session

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has introduced legislation targeting an end to adult illiteracy in the United States by the year 2000.

Simon is author of the Illiteracy Elimination Act addressing what Simon terms "America's hidden education problem." Illiteracy has been the focus of a landmark series of hearings. Simon has chaired across the nation. The bill will help reach the roughly 30 percent of the 23 million to 27 million illiterate adults in Illinois alone — unreachable today by public or private literacy training programs.

Simon already has enlisted 12 key Senate cosponsors — 11 Democrats and one Republican — for his bill, including Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine; Human Resources Committee Chairman Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; and Education Subcommittee Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. Kennedy and Pell chair the Senate panels that will act on the Simon bill, and both pledged to give it high priority on the committee's agenda. The bill stands to become the centerpiece of an initiative of the 101st Congress.

"Basic literacy" is generally defined as the equivalent of fifth-grade reading and writing skills. "Functional literacy" is generally defined as the equivalent of eighth-grade reading and writing skills. The bill tackles illiteracy in both categories.

Functionally illiterate adults "have not been able to do many of the daily activities that most of us take for granted like balancing a checkbook, reading a newspaper, getting a driver's license, filling out a job application, or perhaps most importantly, helping their children with their homework," said Simon.

The Simon bill, introduced in the Senate on July 13, charts the first five years of this new 10-year assault on illiteracy with emphasis on efforts in the workforce, in the community and in the family. It would expand existing effective literacy programs — such as the VISTA Literacy Corps and the Library Literacy Program (both chartered under earlier Simon legislation) — and would provide a new focus and increased funding for programs such as the Adult Basic Education Act. The act provides the first five-year authorization of a ten-year program to wipe out adult illiteracy. Simon has made room in the compromise 1990 federal budget for the bill, which also would target resources for workplace literacy programs and authorize a challenge grant program to expand public/private partnerships in fighting illiteracy. It would create a cabinet-level council to coordinate literacy efforts at the federal level and a national center on literacy to fund research and disseminate information on fighting illiteracy. The bill includes six separate titles addressing: Coordination of national, state and local literacy efforts; workforce literacy; families for literacy; books for families; students for literacy; and volunteers for literacy.

The new Literacy Challenge Grant Program in the bill would provide matching grants to launch or expand public/private partnership efforts using volunteers as a means of addressing illiteracy.

"This is not a made-in-Washington solution but a made-in-Washington partnership," said

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., a cosponsor of the Simon bill.

The Senate Budget Committee estimates the first year cost of the plan would be $204 million over current authorization levels for direct illiteracy programs now in force and about $390 million over current appropriations levels. Simon, a member of the Education Subcommittee and the Budget Committee, has cleared way in the Fiscal Year 1990 budget resolution.

"Illiteracy is the hidden education problem," said Simon. "It gets second-tier treatment, claiming only about 1 percent of the federal budget for education, in terms of direct illiteracy efforts. Illiteracy is a great weight that keeps this country and millions of our citizens from being all they can be. We must fling off that weight, and I sense that Americans are ready to do that, to tackle it head-on."

Simon held Congress' first hearings on adult illiteracy eight years ago and authored the Literacy Corps program that harnesses volunteers in the VISTA program (domestic equivalent of the Peace Corps) who work with local literacy programs to recruit volunteer tutors. On average, one VISTA volunteer recruits and trains 91 community volunteers. Other steps Simon has authored and put into law to combat illiteracy include a program that helps neighborhood libraries double as literacy tutoring centers and 1987 legislation that allows students under the College Work Study program to tutor illiterate adults in exchange for student aid stipends. The Illiteracy Elimination Act would expand these existing efforts and begin new initiatives to combat illiteracy.

Venice PTA group begins new year

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

VENICE — The Venice Schools PTA kicked off the 1989-90 year with a meeting in the school library Sept. 11. About 20 parents and teachers turned out, a big increase over last year's average attendance.

Pres. Sylvia M. Buford read a letter from teacher Gratiens Ponce thanking the PTA for the ceiling fans installed in all classrooms over the summer.

The purchase had been the PTA's main project of the 1988-89 school year, and Ponce said the fans "helped tremendously" during the hot weather at the beginning of the 1988-89 school year.

The group received copies of an open letter to all Madison County parents from Regional Superintendent of Schools Harry

A. Briggs Jr.

"I really agree strongly with Mr. Briggs' assertion that 'parents can help their children perform better in school by supporting school programs,'" said Cynthia Crawford, vice president. "Children get excited when they see their parents are excited."

Crawford, who is also in charge of membership, stressed that the PTA is intent on involving as many parents as possible during the new school year.

Parents of Venice school children can join the PTA for $2 per year.

The Venice Schools PTA meets on the first Monday of each month. Parents interested in the PTA and its programs is being encouraged by the leaders to attend the next meeting on Oct. 2 at 7 p.m. in the school library.

Gold Cougar card now extended to students

Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville will extend the "Gold Cougar Card" pass to area honor roll high school students again this year.

The card enables area high school honor roll students to attend cultural, athletic and entertainment events on the SIUE campus at university student admission rates.

For some events, such as the university's Arts & Issues series, the card entitles bearers to admission at the SIUE student rate of $2.50.

The program series this year features such nationally and internationally recognized speakers as Ed Messer, Dr. Helen Caldicott and William Raspberry and entertainers like jazz pianist Marian McPartland, Loretta Livingston and Dancers, and the Amazing Boyzini.

The Gold Cougar Card may also be used to attend SIUE theater productions and most athletic events, including soccer and basketball games.

SIUE initiated the card several years ago as a means of recognizing academic achievement among high school students. The card is available to honor roll students at high schools within a 75-mile radius of the university. Students may obtain application forms from their principals.

School officials wishing additional information may contact Pam Voss at 692-2626.

Reading handbook ready for parents

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A parent handbook on improving children's reading will soon be made available to elementary school parents in District 9. Superintendent Gilbert "Gib" Walmsley told the Board of Education on Tuesday night that funding for the handbook came from a government reading improvement grant.

The board received petitions from two different school groups.

Parents at Niedringhaus Elementary School presented petitions requesting that they be allowed to pick up their children in front of the school on State Street.

Children are now "only released out of the 29th Street doors of the school to be picked up."

"This situation is still under study and the parents' request will be taken under advisement. We hope to have a recommendation for the board at the next meeting," Walmsley said.

Students and parents from Maryville Elementary School brought petitions requesting that the board reconsider the transfer of teacher Maryann Bright out of Maryville School.

"The kids really liked her and were looking forward to being in her class," said parent Dave Duffield.

"The decision was purely an administrative one," said Walmsley.

"Our elementary administrative assistant, Rich Brinkhoff, made that decision based on careful consideration. We have to look at the needs of the district overall, and it was a tough decision to make."

Brinkhoff was reported to be doing well in the hospital after suffering chest pains earlier in the week.

Approval was given for purchase of three additional Model 25 IBM computers for the secretarial/clerical training course at Granite City High School. Enrollment in that course was higher than expected. The terminals cost $1,236 each.

Also approved were purchases based on various bids on items such as safety goggles for vocational shop classes, dry-cleaning of band uniforms, print shop paper and hand tools for certain classes, mostly at the high school.

The board agreed to hold a special meeting at a time to be determined to discuss the merits of a proposal to allow the GCIS girls' soccer team to use the varsity football field for its games.

The board requested that all concerned coaches be asked to attend the special meeting and provide the board with their opinion of the pros and cons of the proposal.

The next regular District 9 school board meeting will be held Sept. 26 at 6:30 p.m. at the district administrative offices, 20th and Adams streets.

College maintenance delays may prove to be expensive

SPRINGFIELD — Obsolete structures, inefficient equipment and crumbling buildings are the result of millions of dollars in maintenance deferred for years in the Board of Governors of State Colleges and University (BOG) System due to inadequate state funding.

A study recently released by the BOG shows the nature of the problem.

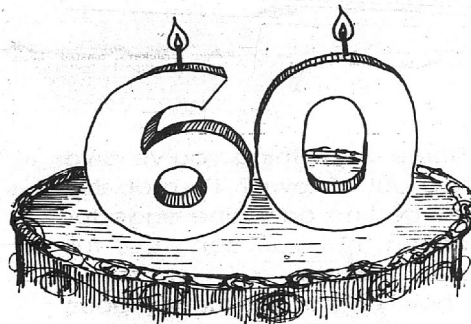

The millions of dollars earmarked for the BOG from the income tax increase will not solve the problem. Money from the Madigan/Rock tax hike bill was allocated to be spent on programs and salaries but not building maintenance.

"The deteriorating condition of campus facilities of American colleges and universities has become a national concern," said BOG Chancellor Thomas D. Layzell. "The BOG System alone has added up over $100 million in deferred maintenance."

If these repairs amounting to $161,767,965 are not made, it will cost an estimated $754,669,977 to replace these buildings. These approximations were computed by the BOG System and then verified by an independent professional firm.

"Since the income tax increase does not provide money to address this particular need, the BOG will begin to prepare its Fiscal Year 1991 (FY91) budget plans to systematically attack this problem," said Layzell.

Trapping of cats eased in Nameoki

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

NAMEOKI — The Township Board on Monday night approved a request by Trustee Joe Garcia that residents no longer be charged a $25 deposit for the use of cat traps.

The Nameoki Township humane officer is to be responsible for the assembly and care of the traps.

Garcia made the request after a resident complained about being asked to make a deposit of $25 to the township office in order to borrow one of the two township-owned cat traps.

The resident wanted to capture and remove stray cats from his neighborhood with the box-like device.

A discussion at the meeting indicated that such a trap does not harm the animals, but only captures them so they may be moved.

In other business, the board announced that Supervisor Lee Ridgeway and Clerk Norman Hall will attend a seminar Friday sponsored by U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello.

The session, called "Southwestern Illinois Looks to the Future: Charting a Course to 2010," will look at "changes taking place in the regional economy and will study ways to strengthen and broaden the area's economic base," a letter from Costello said.

The township currently has a total balance of $178,946 in several financial accounts, reports read at the meeting showed.

MAKE SURE YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR

Shop-At-Home

Do you bring home everything you've paid for when you shop out of town? It's probably not as obvious as getting only nine eggs for the price of a dozen, but you don't get full value for the dollars spent.

Wherever you buy, part of the money goes to support the community in which you spend. Your money goes to support schools, churches, civic projects and to pay people who work in that community.

When you buy anywhere else, your home community is a little poorer because you carried off part of its resources.

Put your eggs all in one basket....with your hometown merchants.

Emergency medical services 'gotten better with time'

By Ken Moser
For the Journal

When Charles Bernaix joined the Granite City Fire Department 17½ years ago, there were no ambulances on the force, much less firefighters with paramedic training.

Back then, a person was pretty much out of luck if he or she suffered injuries in an accident, had a heart attack or was a victim of a violent crime. A private ambulance service would come and pick you up and get you to the nearest hospital.

Oh, the guy in the ambulance may have tried to stop the bleeding or administered CPR (cardio pulmonary resuscitation), but that was about the extent of medical care given at the scene.

"Everything was basic," said Maurice "Moe" Hand, a paramedic for 10 years.

But that was then; this is now.

Ambulance services have grown out of the taxicab and baby delivery service they once were. Today, with more paramedics on the force, the life-saving procedures are being performed right in the field with medication and treatment.

During care, paramedics maintain radio contact with a doctor at a base hospital.

Much has changed in emergency services over the years, including advancements in technology, medicine and communications.

For the last 12½ years, the Granite City Fire Department has operated its own ambulance service, beginning with four 1977 Dodge van-type vehicles. "We still have one 1977 ambulance," Chief Bernaix said, "but we've got a 1981, a 1984, and a 1988 ambulance."

"Two of our ambulances are manned full time; one is an ALS (advanced life support) and the other is a BLS (basic life support)."

In neighboring Madison, Campbell Superior Ambulance Service also staffs two ambulances 24 hours a day. On busy days, all three of the private company's ambulances may be out on calls.

The Campbell service has grown into the largest in Southern Illinois, with bases located in Centralia, Sny, Springfield, Jacksonville, Peoria and Pekin, in addition to Madison and Alton. "There are days when we'll run 20, and then other days when we'll run only four,"

"We average about 10 to 12 calls a day," said Hand, manager of Campbell Superior in Madison and Alton. "There are days when we'll run 20, and then other days when we'll run only four."

The Granite City Fire Department also has kept busy, responding to 2,250 ambulance calls and nearly 900 fire calls in the May 1988-April 1989 year.

At the other end of the local community, in the village of Pontoon Beach, the Long Lake Fire Department has experienced a jump in the number of emergency medical service calls it receives.

Ten years ago, I would say EMS calls were probably anywhere from a half to a third of the fire calls, and now it's one-to-one and maybe even just a hair more EMS calls than fire-fighting calls now," said newly-elected Chief Dale Bowles.

Long Lake primarily operates in Nameoki Township, with the exceptions being Eagle Park and areas south of Granite City Steel. The department has a history that dates back to the late 1940s and early 1950s.

"We've progressed quite a bit since the day they started here with a one-person station, we dedication has always been there. The public is No. 1, and I think it's a rewarding job," said Harris, who has been a paramedic for five years and on the job for six.

"We have saved lives, and that's the most important thing. If we only save one life a year, that's one more than without us. What's really nice is when you get a note or a thank-you card from someone you've either helped or tried to help," he said.

"There are so many times people give us a hard time out there, and we do everything we can. But when we get a letter or a card, it really makes a difference."

Day after day, paramedics see the same tragedies and problem over and over again. "We get more heart attack calls than anything else," Harris said.

"Over the years, we've gotten a lot better at what we do, and I think that goes along with the education we're getting. Before, it was just grab 'em and go. Things have really changed a lot since then."

Among the myriad of changes occurring over the years is an improved relationship with area hospitals.

"It's kind of like a partnership between the hospital, the surrounding departments and EMS groups. (St. Elizabeth Medical Center) is taking a more positive role in what it has to do to make the system better, and Dr. (Steve) Barr had a lot to do with that," Bowles said.

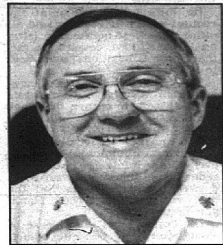

Paramedics also start (intravenous) IVs and administer medication, among other things, under a doctor's orders. Their chief responsibility is stabilizing the patient.

"I'm glad to see the medical center participating like it is. I think that does a lot for boosting the morale of the people involved in EMS and the system overall."

"After you have been at it for so long and see the same tragedies and the same problems day after day, you have a tendency to get burned out. You have to stand back every once in a while and take a new look at things."

Paramedics receive part of their training at SEMC. "They receive hands-on experience in our emergency room," said Dr. Steve Barr, medical director of the E.R. "The hospital also provides lectures for continuing medical education."

In addition, ER nursing staff and physicians sit in on monthly reviews and help evaluate paramedics' job performances. Paramedics also rotate through the medical center's IV Therapy Department to receive training and certification. And the Anesthesiology Department teaches CPR and intubation courses in conjunction with the emergency room.

Each year, the medical center also participates in areawide disaster drills.

(Editor's note: Local emergency response services will celebrate EMS Week, Sept. 17-23. On Tuesday, Sept. 19, from 1 to 4 p.m., the public is invited to attend an antique fire truck and ambulance display at St. Elizabeth Medical Center.)

Two-way left-turn lanes require special caution

The following article is by Secretary of State Jim Edgar.

Illinois motorists on busy streets and highways benefit from two-way left-turn lanes.

To keep traffic moving smoothly and safely, motorists who use these lanes should obey the following laws:

• When a two-way left-turn lane is provided, turn from that lane only. Do not turn left across it from another lane.

• Keep the two-way left-turn lane open. Enter the lane just before reaching the place where you want to turn. Enter the lane just before reaching the place where you want to turn. Do not use it as a passing lane or as an extra approach lane to an intersection.

• When waiting to turn, do not straddle the lane diagonally and hang over into one or both adjacent lanes.

• If you are turning left onto a street with a two-way left-turn lane, you may turn into that lane, then enter the adjacent through lane.

• You may use the two-way left-turn lane for a U-turn if U-turns are permitted.

Two-way left-turn lanes remove left-turning vehicles from through lanes and increase traffic capacity. Studies conducted by the Department of Transportation also show a significant reduction in accident rates after installation of these lanes. The lanes, which are marked with yellow pavement markings, often provide easier access to businesses and shopping centers located between intersections.

Shell

"We have been in talking with the Office of the Attorney General and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency for some time. We will continue to talk and are confident the issue will be resolved," Canino said.

"We always operate the refinery in such a way as to comply with all environmental regulations and laws, and we do not believe the incidents listed in the complaint will have any long-term health effects."

"As the matter is under litigation, I don't want to go into specifics at this point," the Shell spokesman said.

Hartigan urged Thursday that funds awarded in the suit be set aside for persons living near the plant, to be used for health screenings and reimbursements to residents for property damage.

In 1988 and 1989 there were hundreds of releases of particulates from the plant and also hundreds of sulfur dioxide emissions, the state's top legal officer contended.

Hartigan said the emissions created a potentially very serious health risk to those residing near the refinery.

"The releases could easily have had disastrous consequences for persons living in one of the homes near the refinery. Nor does anyone know the long-term effect of these hundred of emissions over the two-year period," Hartigan said.

"There is no reason in the world that this should go on," Hartigan was critical of the state Environmental Protection Agency for its delay in reporting the Shell Oil problems to him.

"This is totally unacceptable to me," he said.

He entered the case at the request of the EPA. He said his office was first notified by letter on June 18, 1989, despite the fact that some allegations went back to 1987.

"By filing the suit, we will have the weight of the state's court system to ensure that Shell develops a workable plan and follows through with it."

"Companies that deal with dangerous chemicals must do everything humanly possible to reduce the inherent hazards. It doesn't make sense to roll the dice with people's lives," Hartigan stressed.

The suit alleges the release of 4,900 pounds of benzene, which allegedly can cause headaches, dizziness and possible death, when a vapor pipe in a distilling unit ruptured on Dec. 29, 1987.

Between Aug. 13-28, 1988, the catalytic cracking unit released 84 tons of nickel, vanadium and other metal dust because a pollution control device was out of service, the suit alleges.

On March 10 this year, 30,000 pounds of benzene allegedly escaped from a ruptured pipe in the benzene extraction unit.

Releases in 1988 and 1989 included particulates, such as dust from the catalytic cracker, the suit alleges.

About 100 releases in 1988-89 involved excessive sulfur dioxide emissions from the sulfuric acid plant, it is contended.

One of the counts in the suit says 7,500 pounds of benzene, 2,000 pounds of hydrogen sulfide and 300 pounds of methyl mercaptan were accidentally released from pressure relief valves in the plant's distilling unit on Feb. 16, 1989.

The firm will be required to develop an emergency plan and must implement such a plan immediately, Hartigan asserted.

"We are suggesting the fines go into a special fund, to reimburse residents for property damage and for individuals concerned about their health to take the money for health examinations to see if any serious problems are present," he said.

"Why not use the money from the penalties to help people involved and arrange a trust fund rather than put the money into the state general revenue fund? Earnback it for property damage and environmental enforcement activity in the immediate area of the plant."

The court also is asked in the suit to order the company to comply with regulations and make a hazard and operability study.

Part of the discovery process will be to determine if other releases occurred on specific dates, Hartigan said.

Records from the company, the Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency and the state EPA will be compiled, he said.

Proposed increases in the schedule of fines now before the state Legislature could raise the amount for certain offenses nearly five times, he said.

"Instead of nearly $1.2 million in fines (under existing law), multiply that by five. I'm sure that will get someone's attention," Hartigan said.

Activists launch 'Sold out by St. Louis'

By Ann Raible-Nicholson
Staff writer

Bridgeton residents are launching a "Sold out by St. Louis" campaign in protest of airport expansion alternatives.

Organizers of Bridgeton Air Defense (BAD), a group fighting the extension of Lambert-St. Louis International Airport operations into Bridgeton, said the "sold out" theme will appear on bumper stickers and posters.

BAD will launch a media blitz in the next few weeks to publicize what it says are the probable effects of proposed expansion to businesses and private citizens considering moving to the metropolitan area.

Three of the four expansion concepts released by the airport involve extending operations into Bridgeton.

"As fellow residents of the metro region, we are not planning an 'anti-St. Louis' campaign per se," said Bridgeton Mayor Conrad Bowers.

"We feel that business decision-makers who will be considering St. Louis for relocation, as well as the general public contemplating moving into the area, have got to be made aware of this situation."

BAD representatives said the BAD representatives said the city of St. Louis, which owns the airport, has "sold out" Bridgeton by proposing expansion alternatives which would destroy the municipality.

city of St. Louis, which owns the airport, has "sold out" Bridgeton by proposing expansion alternatives which would destroy the municipality. Organizers added that the alternatives were chosen without input from Bridgeton officials.

Officials of Lambert Airport insist that expansion is necessary to allow Lambert to remain viable.

Mark Conway, an airport planner, said the number of passengers at Lambert is expected to double by 2010, reaching an annual rate of about 19 million.

"As activity levels grow, aircraft operational delays will escalate," Conway said. "The increased delay costs (to airlines) associated with the 19 million passenger level is expected to be five times greater than present levels, reaching nearly $300 million."

Gen. Donald Bennett, the airport's director, said the operational increases to airlines would be unacceptable.

"We must take aggressive action to cut aircraft delays at Lambert Field," he said. "Our master plan projects that the delay increases will be unmanageable and could have serious ramifications to the airlines and Lambert Airport in the future if we do nothing to expand the facility now."

Since the announcement of four proposed expansion plans, BAD has received donations and pledges of almost $100,000 to fight airport expansion.

The Bridgeton City Council last week passed a resolution approving a proposal by St. Louis Alderman Paul Beckerle, D-25th Ward, for putting three voting county members on the Airport Commission. Currently, one non-voting member serves on the board from St. Louis County.

Councilmen said that while they would like to see more than three voting members on the nine-person board, having at least some voting members was a step in the right direction.

The Pattonville School District passed a resolution Thursday opposing any expansion plans which would negatively affect the district.

Superintendent Roger Clough said the district is considering an educational/environmental study on the impact of expansion after the airport releases its final expansion decision in mid-October.

Clough said that, based on present concepts, the Carrollton and Carrollton Oaks schools could be wiped out. He added that the district also would suffer a loss in tax revenue and a decline in enrollment if large portions of Bridgeton were bought out.

Last week, more than 300 residents from the Villa Maria and Cedar Brook subdivisions in unincorporated St. Louis County met with state Rep. Judith O'Connor, D-Bridgeton, on the impact of expansion.

O'Connor said residents in these subdivisions would be affected by increased airplane noise if the airport selected by expansion to the northwest.

SLU hospital receives two-state designation

ST. LOUIS — The University Hospital at St. Louis University Medical Center has been awarded a dual-state designation as a Level I Trauma Center, serving Missouri and southern Illinois.

The Illinois Department of Public Health made the presentation in a formal ceremony establishing The University Hospital as one of only two facilities in the U.S. to receive a dual-state designation.

"This will benefit the communities in southern Illinois which will now have a formal relationship with a Level I Trauma Center," said Frank J. Siano, administrator for the emergency department. "This shows not only our ability but the degree of confidence those communities have in us. We will continue to demonstrate St. Louis University Medical Center's commitment to trauma and trauma care."

St. Louis University Medical Center was the first institution in the area to receive the Level I designation, in 1981. A hospital earns this designation by meeting more than 100 criteria established by the American College of Surgeons, which certifies hospitals as Level I, II, or III.

Level I Trauma Centers stand alone in offering any treatment at a moment's notice. The hospital must be staffed around the clock by a physician in the emergency room, a surgeon and an anesthesiologist. In addition, physicians in all major surgical specialties and sub-specialties must be available in-house. The operating room must be ready for use 24-hours-a-day and physicians must have immediate access to X-ray and CT-scan equipment. There are only three Level I Trauma Centers in the St. Louis metropolitan area.

Marc J. Shapiro, M.D., assistant director of the emergency department and director of trauma surgery, said, "We will continue to be a leader in a metropolitan area to serve trauma. We have served as a model for the state of Missouri, and we will be the same model for the state of Illinois as well."

Nash to chair Scott speakers

Richard F. Nash, a partner with the Gundlach, Lee, Eggmann, Boyle and Boessler law firm in Belleville, has volunteered to be the speakers' bureau chairman for the Citizens' Committee for Scott Joint Use.

As chairman, Nash will take the lead in establishing a speakers' bureau in an eight-county area including Bond, Clinton, Madison, Monroe, Montgomery, Randolph, St. Clair and Washington counties. He will coordinate efforts with speaker's bureau chairmen yet to be named from each of these counties.

The committee expects to make at least 250 presentations in the next year to promote the joint military-civilian use of Scott Air Force Base, Belleville.

An avid supporter of joint use, Nash hopes to help keep the public "fully-informed and up to date on the economic benefits of the airport."

Nash, a native of Illinois, holds both a bachelor of science degree and juris doctor degree from Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

Mark Hinrichs of Belleville is serving as Scott petition drive chairman. A finance chairman will be named in the near future.

To request a speaker or information or to volunteer, persons may write to The Citizens' Committee for Scott Joint Use, P.O. Box 8166, Belleville 62222 or call (618) 233-8689.

Crime victim programs receive funding

Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan recently announced that four St. Clair County agencies will receive a total of $81,300 to be used for their Violent Crime Victims' Assistance programs.

"Not one cent of this comes from the taxpayers. Funding for the Assistance Act comes completely from fines the criminals pay, and will continue to pay, for their despicable acts. The ones who cause the pain will pay for the staff salaries, the new programs or other services provided by these not-for-profit agencies," Hartigan said.

"Each year, we have worked to expand the number of agencies funded through this program. We're reaching 20 more agencies throughout the state as compared to last year. This year, we're reaching more suburban, more minority-based organizations including Blacks and Hispanics and have added specialized programs for victims who are disabled or elderly.

"These agencies range from those who help sexually abused children to victims of domestic violence. It's all part of our effort to assist women who are abused and to protect their rights. We've come across a spectrum of programs that is truly impressive, and we are very fortunate to have so many programs that reach out to victims and survivors of violent crimes."

For example, the Women's Crisis Center of Metro-East provides comprehensive assistance to domestic violence victims in a five-county area. Services include shelter, counseling, transportation, education, support groups and a crisis hotline.

The current grant is for $12,000. It is the seventh Crime Victims' Assistance grant the agency has received, for a total of $75,000.

Any public or private not-for-profit agency may apply to the attorney general for selection and funding as a victim and witness assistance center under the Act.

Agencies receiving grants include:

- Call for Help-Sexual Assault Victims Care Unit, East St. Louis, $15,500.

- St. Clair County State's Attorney's Office-Belleville, $30,000.

- Volunteers of America of Illinois-Chicago, $17,800.

- Women's Crisis Center of Metro-East-Belleville, $18,000.

Only average harvest seen

Spotty rainfall distribution in Southern Illinois may lead to no more than "average" yields this harvest season, according to agronomists at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

"We simply haven't gotten enough timely rainfall this year," said Farrel J. Olsen, professor of plant and soil science in the SIUC College of Agriculture.

Gauges at SIUC's Agronomy Research Center tell the tale: less than an inch of rain for the entire month of August.

"Those are really inadequate levels for full crop potential," said Olsen. "Farmers need at least 1 inch each week to reach yield expectations."

Last year, during the drought, rain levels at University Farms stood at almost 3 inches for July and another 2.5 for August, for a total of 5.5 inches.

"We probably saw a better year last year in Southern Illinois or at least in Jackson County, as far as yields are concerned," said Oval Myers, professor of plant and soil science.

Both Olsen and Myers expect an average of about 85 to 90 bushels of corn per acre this harvest season, similar to last year. "Much of the corn in this area is quite a bit smaller in ear size this year because of the lack of mid-summer rains," said Olsen.

"Although we had originally thought this year would be exceptional because of early rainfall levels, a dry spell in July probably hindered pollination rates in corn," Myers explained.

The dry, hot weather has also affected soybeans. "Those who planted soybeans in early June may see a much smaller plant because of dry periods during usual growth spells," said Myers. "We're looking at about a 31-bushel-per-acre yield this year in Southern Illinois. That's about five bushels below the state's average."

Reports of Sudden Death Syndrome and the soybean cyst nematode also are up, said Myers. An estimated 80 percent of all fields below Interstate 70 have some cyst nematode infestation; dry summer weather tends to enhance the effect of cyst nematodes. And early-season rainfall and cool weather at soybean planting have meant SDS in soybean fields.

Myers and Olsen said that only about half of the producers in Southern Illinois are double-cropping wheat with soybeans, compared to what the agronomists originally expected.

"However, we should be ahead of last year because virtually no one double-cropped in the midst of the drought," said Olsen.

Donor tissue being grown in lab

Unfortunately, there are not enough organs available to meet the needs of patients in need of transplants. The shortage is especially acute in children. Adult organs are often too big for transplantation, and so children die, often because organs are not available.

About three out of every four children who need a transplant, die before a suitable donor can be found. An attempt is being made to overcome this shortage. The needed tissue is being grown in the laboratory — a rather difficult task.

The procedure begins by taking cells directly from the patient needing the transplant. This is very important because any potential rejection will be avoided by using the patient's own tissue. Even if the patient has damaged or diseased organs, some healthy cells can usually be found to serve as the starting material.

In the laboratory, the cells can be grown in a cell culture media, while supported by a polymer scaffold. The scaffold is needed to give adequate surface for the cells to grow. The scaffold is made of bio-degradable plastic that slowly breaks down and is absorbed by the body.

Currently, the research effort involves laboratory animals, and organs have been successfully grown and then transplanted into these animals. It will be a long time before this type of procedure is used on humans.

There are a lot of potential applications for tissues grown in the laboratory. So far, cartilage and intestine cells have been grown, as well as liver cells. Tissue grown in the laboratory could be used in reconstructive surgery as well as transplants.

In cirrhosis of the liver, the anticipated scenario would be as follows: Some healthy cells would be taken from the patient, then grown on a polymer scaffold in the laboratory. When enough tissue has been grown, the diseased liver would be replaced with the laboratory tissue.

There is also the possibility of growing insulin producing tissue to aid diabetics. If suitable cells were not available from the patient, a close relative could act as donor. The "insulin producing tissue" could then be transplanted into the patient, relieving the diabetic condition.

An extension of this procedure could be the modification of the cells, using DNA splicing, before they are grown in the laboratory. This could overcome a genetic defect in the patient.

Growing organs in the laboratory may soon become common place. If and when it does happen, medical procedures will have taken a giant step forward in alleviating many of mankind's illnesses.

Choosing the 'right' doctor important for body and mind

By Dr. George D. Malkasian

If you are like many women today, you may depend on your obstetrician-gynecologist for most of your basic health care needs, not just for reproductive health matters. That is why choosing the doctor who is right for you could be one of the most important things you do for your health.

Finding a "good" doctor, one who comes highly recommended and one you trust and feel comfortable with, might take a little work. You first should ask yourself what is important to you in a doctor and in the doctor-patient relationship.

Asking your friends, co-workers or relatives whether they would recommend their doctor is a good way to start. The most important question you should ask them is why they like their doctor. If their answers fit some of your criteria for a good doctor, follow up on their leads.

If you are new to an area and do not know other women to ask, the physician who took care of you in your old hometown may be able to recommend new doctors. The local or state medical society or hospitals can give you names of doctors in your area. Recommendations, however, only should be the start of your search for a doctor.

A doctor's credentials will give you some idea of his expertise and training, which is important for you to know. Your local library should have a copy of "Directory of Medical Specialists," a "who's who" of physicians. There you can check to see which physician received training. The directory also will tell you whether he is board-certified, meaning the doctor has had intensive training and passed certifying examinations in obstetrics and gynecology.

Keep practical matters in mind, too. Is the location of the doctor's office convenient for you? Do the office hours fit your schedule? What fees are charged?

The most important aspects in looking for a doctor only can be assessed when you are in the doctor's office. Does your doctor listen to you and answer your questions so that you understand what he or she is saying? Does the doctor give you the time that you feel is necessary to talk about your concerns? Are you comfortable with the manner in which the doctor examines you?

An obstetrician-gynecologist will play a big role in your health care during your reproductive years and long afterward, but the leading role is yours. If you make informed decisions about the doctors you choose, at least you can feel assured that your health care is in good hands.

Dr. George D. Malkasian is president of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Cadets wear down Warriors in second half for 3-0 triumph

"VICTOR/VICTORIA," A BLAKE EDWARDS' CLASSIC, starred the director's wife, Julie Andrews, right, and the late Robert Preston.

Blake Edwards' newest film comes to home video market

By Mason Wiley
Bowling in now on video is Blake Edwards' "Skin Deep" (1989, Media Home Entertainment, $89.95), a riotous sex farce starring John Ritter, that was the No. 1 box-office hit this summer in France.

The centerpiece of "Skin Deep" is a hilarious scene that finds comedy in the serious circumstance of sex in the '80s—the fear of AIDS. Leave it to Edwards to take this decidedly unfunny situation and turn it into classical bedroom farce by playing off the phenomenon of glow-in-the-dark condoms. The special effects employed in this gag are by George Lucas' outfit, Industrial Light and Magic. They define their function when, after all the spaceships and cute aliens they have created, Edwards came in and asked them for animated prophylactics.

Edwards has been a sexual pioneer of the screen from the beginning. His adaptation of Truman Capote's "Breakfast at Tiffany's" (1961, Paramount, $19.95), has a delicate touch that prevents the story of two people (played by Audrey Hepburn and George Peppard) who are "kept" by wealthy lovers from being a sordid tale and makes it a sparkling romantic comedy.

Edwards doesn't shrink from the reality and pain of romance, but he provides an elegant entertainment package with glossy production values and Henry Mancini's Oscar-winning score.

Edwards' marriage to Julie Andrews in 1969 has proved to be a match made in movie heaven. What better foil for this satirist of sexual mores than that paragon of virtue, Mary Poppins/Maria von Trapp herself. In his scathing sendup of Hollywood, "S.O.B." (1981, CBS/Fox, $19.95), Edwards makes his wife a star with a squeaky clean image (her biggest hit is "Peter Pan"). She ends up baring her breasts on film in order to save her latest kiddie musical from financial disaster. Only Andrews could flash the audience and get away with it.

Edwards then asked his wife to go transvestite in "Victor/Victoria" (1982, MGM/UA, $24.95). In this musical-comedy about gender confusion, Andrews is a flat-broke singer in '30s Paris who improves her fortune by posing as a gay, female-impersonator. James Garner plays her heterosexual but confused suitor, and the late Robert Preston is her homosexual co-conspirator. Edwards' frothy style gives the picture the elan of an Ernst Lubitsch comedy of the '30s ("Trouble in Paradise") while exploring the nature of sexual preference in up-to-date terms.

Critic Anthony Cook has described the "archetypal Edwards hero" as "a hapless womanizer" and the "quintessentially Edwardian moment" as "Boy meets girl, boy wows girl, boy gets stripped of dignity." Dudley Moore has played the part twice. In "10½" (1979, Warner, $24.95), he is a successful songwriter going through a midlife crisis who makes an idiot of himself chasing after Bo Derek.

Moore is a gentler fool in "Mickie and Maude" (1984, RCA/Columbia, $12.95), as a man so desperate to become a father he winds up a bigamist with two pregnant wives (Amy Irving and Ann Reinking).

In Edwards' remake of Francois Truffaut's "The Man Who Loved Women" (1983, available for rental only), the director wrote the script with his own psychiatrist (only in Hollywood). Burt Reynolds gives one of his most thoughtful, and uncharacteristic, performances as the tortured hero, and Kim Basinger displays her blazing comic ability as the most sexually voracious of his many conquests. Guess who plays Burt's shrink? Julie Andrews, of course.

Hackman enjoys war portrayals

By Harry Hamm
Journal Correspondent
Gene Hackman has consistently found work since starting in films in 1963, when he portrayed a grating small town husband in "Liath." And his body of work has not gone unnoticed: he has been nominated for five Academy Awards, including his portrayal last year of a driven FBI agent in "Mississippi Burning," and collected one Oscar, for best actor in "The French Connection" in 1971.

But the 58-year-old native of San Bernardino, Calif., who also has extensive stage credits dating back to the early 1950s, came up the hard way.

After a stint with the U.S. Marine Corps, Hackman headed east to attend the New York School of Radio Technique. He supported himself during this period by selling shoes, working at a soda fountain and being the doorman at the Howard Johnson hotel in Times Square.

He then headed west to California and enrolled at the famed Pasadena Playhouse, where the instructors pleaded with both Hackman and his roommate to give up acting.

That roommate was Dustin Hoffman. Hackman has developed a reputation for playing pugnacious, calculating men. His own hard-headedness has allowed Hackman a kind of blindness in his work that translates on the screen to a quality of single-minded energy and purpose. However, his most critically acclaimed films, "I Never Sang For My Father" in 1970, "The Conversation" in 1974 and "Night Moves" in 1975, were all failures at the box office.

"I suppose if you really pin me down, 'The Conversation' is my favorite (film), Hackman said recently. "But I also enjoyed 'Night Moves,' although to this day I don't have the faintest idea about what it was really about."

Since his days as a young Marine, Hackman has displayed an affinity for playing military men in many of his films, including his latest motion picture from Orion, "The Package."

"I think guys in the military somehow exemplify a lot of what Americans believe in," Hackman said. "We're a country of patriots, I think. Hopefully, and I think the character I play in 'The Package,' a regular guy who tries to stop an assassination, represents what a lot of us are capable of doing in a heroic, patriotic sense, under the same circumstances."

What made Hackman decide to start a military career at the tender age of 16?

"It was real peculiar," Hackman continued. "There wasn't a war being fought then in 1947. It was thrilling to be in China, especially since my family was living in Danville, Ill. at the time."

Hackman said he will never allow his affinity for the military to change his own independent views.

"I think all of us should question to some degree what happens to us," Hackman said. "When our lives are run by people that maybe we don't have much confidence in, we should think for ourselves."

"I'm not saying that the people in power right now in our country are not competent. But I think we should always, to keep everybody honest, question authority to see where we are. I've always felt the difference between a hero and a coward, when it comes to the strengths of your personal convictions, is just one step sideways."

BELLEVILLE — After countless hours of planning and organizing, Belleville's 175th birthday celebration officially began Friday with the ceremonial tapping of a golden half-barrel by Mayor Richard Brauer on the main stage at noon.

The three days ending today are being packed with everything from nationally known country and western bands to a historical pageant to local performers to hundreds of pounds of bratwurst and hundreds of kegs of beer.

The celebration covers seven blocks of West and East Main streets.

Lois Stroh of O'Fallon, a longtime Belleville resident, is the head of a 15-member committee that worked to plan the celebration. She is based in a "command post" at 200 E. Main St., a room located behind the 175th Anniversary Gift Shop.

ENTERTAINMENT — Three stages feature both local and nationally-acclaimed talent, all performing for free. Big names on the weekend agenda included Shenandoah, the Bellamy Brothers, Herendy Singers and Michael Martin Murphey.

One of the entertainment highlights is a performance by the Belleville Philharmonic and a massed community chorus at 8 p.m. Sunday.

Those attending the concert are urged to bring their own lawn chairs.

REFRESHMENTS — Food and Beverage Chairman Jim Smith said the celebration will feature nearly 30 food booths carrying both traditional German fare and other items like fried chicken, barbecue, hamburgers, pizza, egg rolls and hot dogs.

A WALK THROUGH HISTORY — Along the first few blocks of West Main Street, festival-goers can return to Belleville as it was 175 years ago and before.

Included will be blocks featuring an American Indian village and displays from Cahokia mound site featuring early farm machinery and tools, a muzzle-loaders camp and a Civil War encampment. At a petting corral, children can get a close look at farm animals like lambs.

CITY HALL — There will be several displays at City Hall, including three historical quilts, Belleville Journal/175th Anniversary Committee photo contest winners and a "Celebrity Wall of Fame" featuring photographs and biographical information on 30 prominent Belleville residents.

In the council chambers will be a photo display featuring 38 Belleville mayors.

Also in the council chambers will be screenings of an hour-long documentary on Belleville. The schedule for the screenings includes: Sunday, 2:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m.
